

charges that he was a polygamist, or that he ever had but one wife, who, before her marriage, was Alpha May Eldridge, and whom he married September 17, 1884. In like manner he denied that his election was not proper. He contended that he was amenable to aid and bound to uphold the constitution and laws of the United States, including the condition in reference to polygamy upon which the State of Utah was admitted to the Union.

January 16, 1904, the case was taken up by the Senate. Robert W. Taylor, counsel for the protestants, presenting that side of the case, claimed that Smoot was bound to accept and obey the doctrines of the Mormon Church whether they affect things temporal or spiritual. This condition being the status of Mr. Smoot politically, he was disqualified to retain his seat in Congress.

Answering Mr. Taylor's presentation the defense claimed that the Senate had no jurisdiction to consider a charge made against a Senator for an offense alleged to have been committed by him prior to his election. The defense did not claim to rebut the allegations further than the sworn testimony submitted by Mr. Smoot went, its aim being to assert that the Senate had no right to convict and remove one of its members for an alleged offense which the people of his own State did not recognize.

Smoot on Stand.

Smoot went on the stand during the second session of the hearing. He stated that there was nothing in the oath or obligation about averting the blood of the prophets or anything else on this nation or on this Government.

He said the endowment had never been changed. It was founded by Joseph F. Smith, Jr., who was still alive, and it would appear strange to have such an oath administered while the founder of the obligation was in no immediate fear or need of vengeance. In like manner he contended that there was nothing in his past life, either in connection with the church or otherwise, that would affect his loyalty to his country as recognized by the oath of office of a Senator of the United States.

Joseph F. Smith, of the twelve apostles, was the principal witness before the committee. His first examination occupied five days. He appeared from time to time throughout the proceedings. He admitted that he was living in defiance of the laws of the State of Utah, and said he would continue to do so, notwithstanding the issuance of the manifesto.

Some More Witnesses.

Other witnesses who were called were William Wolfe, A. W. Powers, Mrs. Mabel Kennedy, ex-Governor McCannell, William Budge, and J. E. Goegebein. Mrs. Mabel Kennedy's testimony was probably the most sensational of all adduced. She testified that she had been married as a plural wife by Brigham Young since the manifesto. She knew the conditions of the plural marriage, but she did not advise her parents of her actions. Corroborating Mrs. Kennedy's testimony, her mother declared she did not know her daughter was a married woman until she had been summoned to appear in the case.

She made a deep impression on the committee. Her statements were frank and clear. To the minds of the members it revealed that there was a condition existing that was unthought of. Her statement may go a considerable way towards settling the case.

Women Who Fought.

Back of the woman's organization fighting the case are Mrs. Frederick Schott, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Tule Hamlin, of Washington, D. C.; and Mrs. E. V. Grice. These women, acting in an official capacity for the league, have collected the money to carry on the case. As their representative, C. E. Owen, has been engaged in looking up evidence, and in keeping the attorneys, John G. Carlisle and Robert W. Taylor, posted as to the political situation in Utah. A. S. Worthington has represented the defense throughout.

During the hearing the name of Mrs. Smoot was kept out of the case to a remarkable extent. Mr. Smoot was the only one who brought her name into record.

From the beginning the protestants did not try to prove the allegation that Smoot was a polygamist. The home life of the Senator was likewise safeguarded, the issue being fought out solely along the lines of his being a member of the twelve apostles. He admitted, however, that he was free to resign such a connection at any time if he thought it impaired his qualification as a member of the Senate of the United States.

MOB STARTED TO HANG RECKLESS MINE GUARD

SCRANTON, Pa., May 5.—James McLary, a mine guard, brought here from New York and employed at the Sunny Side colliery, tonight, had a narrow escape from lynching in Green Ridge, a suburb.

It is charged that McLary came to this city with another guard named Michael Malloy, of Brooklyn, and had been drinking heavily. They started back along the Lackawanna tracks. McLary knocked his companion down, robbed him of $80, and a revolver, and proceeded to Green Ridge. He began stopping women on the street and pointing a revolver at them. A crowd started in pursuit, and he turned and shot three times at them, but no one was hurt.

McLary started to run. A passenger train on the Lackawanna track came along, and he emptied his revolver at the train window. The crowd secured ropes to hang him just as Sheriff Becker arrived and took the man into custody.

DROWNED MAN'S BODY STILL UNIDENTIFIED

NEW YORK. — The body of a drowned man, floating in the harbor at the foot of Gibson street, had not been identified up to today. The body was discovered by George Thompson and Carl Pearson, seamen of the tug Nankette.

It was that of a man about five feet seven inches in height, weighing about 135 pounds, with brown hair and brown, stubby mustache. He wore black and white striped trousers, white collar, black necktie, black socks and black laced shoes. The only articles found on the body were two keys, a comb and a Chinese laundry ticket. The body had been in the water for some time.

OLD SWEETHEARTS ARE NOW MISSING

Leave a Husband Grieving and a Wife Angry.

"GONE WITH MAN I LOVE"

Pretty Mrs. Bond Was Sealy's Beloved Ten Years Ago—They Met Again.

NEW YORK, May 5.—John J. Sealy, a letter carrier, living at 534 Trinity avenue, the Bronx, is missing with his little five-year-old boy. The young and handsome wife of George Bond, a well-to-do clothing merchant, living at 75 Timponia place, also is reported as missing.

Mrs. Sealy, who is about to become a mother, is prostrated with grief. Mr. Bond, who had never the slightest reason to doubt his wife, is heart broken. She left home Wednesday morning after sending her little daughter to school. On the table Mr. Bond found this note:

"I have gone away with the man I love—Louise."

The police have been asked to look for Sealy and Mrs. Bond, and Mrs. Sealy announced that she would apply for a warrant for the arrest of her husband on the charge of abandonment. His description and picture have been sent broadcast.

Ten years ago John J. Sealy and Miss Louise Zimmerman were sweethearts. They were engaged for two years and then the match was broken off. Miss Zimmerman married, in place, it is said, George Bond, one of the oldest and most trusted employees of a large clothing establishment at Twenty-first street and Fifth avenue.

He was well-to-do and owned the house in Timponia place. Sealy married in his turn. He drifted from one employment to another and finally landed in the Bronx as a letter carrier.

His route led him through Timponia place. One day he delivered a letter at No. 75. The maid was not in and a handsome young woman came to the door. As she took the letter she started. It was the first meeting of the two sweethearts in ten years.

After that they met almost every day. Mrs. Bond's mother, who lives at 724 East 149th street, warned her daughter against meeting her former admirer.

Mrs. Bond is not yet twenty-eight years old and retains all her beauty. She is dark and well proportioned. Sealy is a handsome fellow of attractive personality.

HOW ARTISTS USE PEN AND INK LINES

TENTH ARTICLE

This is the tenth of the series of articles on Pen and Ink Drawing, which The Times has published each Sunday, illustrated with pictures by Charles Dana Gibson.

Stories of the war fascinate young hearers and give pleasure to old tellers. The little schoolboy always passes through a period when his ambition is to become a soldier, and this ambition receives fuel every time he meets one who was an actor in that great tragedy of American history. He will sit by the hour and listen while the veteran fights his battles over again, and if the veteran has a wound or two to show as proof of his prowess, he is exalted in the juvenile mind to the pedestal of a hero.

This is the subject of the sketch by Charles Dana Gibson which accompanies The Times today. A handsome, manly little lad sits spellbound at the table which separates him from an aged warrior with an empty sleeve. The veteran is telling the boy how he lost the arm—at Antietam, the Wilderness, Gettysburg, or Fredericksburg, whichever it may be. The child's interest pleases the veteran, who loves nothing better than to tell the story of his campaigns, and especially of the loss of that arm. With splendid complacency and pardonable pride he tells the hardships, the slaughter, the desperate fighting, the heroism, and the boy sees himself some day battling for his country and his flag, and perhaps earning an empty sleeve also as his badge of honor.

It is interesting to study the successive steps by which a picture like this is drawn, and the process should prove instructive to the student. The picture was drawn in pencil, first in rough outline, then in more detail. The faces and hands were worked over until their forms satisfied the artist, who then took his pen, a heavy, strong one first, and drew the outlines of the man's face over the pencil lines. They are broken outlines, formed of heavy angular lines, and they melt into the shading in a way that shows the whole face was drawn at one time; the outline of the nose was followed by the shadows and wrinkles upon it, and so on, for it will be observed there is scarcely any actual outline in this face. The lines were drawn with extreme rapidity, as is evident from the two intersecting zig-zags that form the hollow of the left cheek.

The face finished, the heaviest and blackest lines, forming the creases of the coat, were drawn, the artist laying on hard with a big pen filled with ink and still working rapidly. Then the coat was covered swiftly with the lines that give the color and texture. The hand was probably drawn last, but it had been studied out carefully in pencil, for that suggestive position of the fingers holding the empty sleeve is no accident. ## KAISER DROPS OUT AS A YACHTSMAN

BERLIN, May 5.—Whether or no: the Kaiser will enter the Cowes regatta this year is an undecided question. The defeat of the American built Meteor, the boat that was christened by Miss Alice Roosevelt, now Mrs. Longworth, occasioned such chagrin to the Emperor that he could not conceal it.

Since the Meteor was launched over $50,000 is said to have been spent on refitting and alterations, and the yacht has been overhauled twice in English yards. That the Kaiser is greatly disappointed at the showing of his yacht is well known, and the Vulcan Company, at Stettin, has had designs for a new racing boat for some time, but as yet the company has not received word to go on with construction.

IN MEMORIAM.

HARRIS—In loving remembrance of MAD-LENE HARRIS (nee McIntosh), who entered into rest, four years ago today, May 6, 1902. Death has been here and borne away a daughter from our side. Just in the morning of the day As young as we she died.

Not long ago she filled her place And sat with us to learn; But she has run her mortal race And never shall return.

She will sleep, but not forever; There will be a glorious dawn. We shall meet to part, no never. On the resurrection morn.

By HER MOTHER AND SISTER.
